Quintessential American fare marks 50th anniversary

Lin Yutang, the Chinese writer, once asked, "What is patriotism but the love of the food one ate as a child?"

Fellow Americans, when you close your eyes and imagine the taste of home, what do you see? Burgers? Apple pie? Hamburgers? Apple pie? The taste of home, what do you see? Hamburgers? Apple pie?

What's on your mind? After Rep. Paul Ryan's recent claim that cultural factors play a role in the persistence of poverty, do you think Ryan is correct? Yes, liberal policies have caused the welfare state to turn into a "time machine" for the poor. No, Ryan's comments are a "tailspin of denial." Write your opinion in 400 words. Advocate worked tirelessly to keep motorcyclists safe

When this trust老ing may seem uninteresting to the great majority of thousands reading it, the intended message is dedicated to the importance contained in its conclusive. Capitalizing the daily impact on motor vehicle safety and awareness attributed to the lifelong perseverance of a Finger Lakes-area resident, G. William (Bill) Cox, Bill succumbed to a rare occurrence of liver failure recently and left behind a legacy of unprecedented quality leadership in New York’s motorcycle community representing thousands of riders, their families and friends.

In the late 1980s, Bill was instrumental in developing closer relationships between men and women bikers throughout the state and their families. He and his wife, Pam, a Canandaigua small-business owner, and daughters, Trisha, a health care specialist, and Kristina, a law enforcement officer, quietly carried the banner for setting high standards of safety and equity for all motorcyclists, with each being known for their personal integrity and professional competence.

Bill's local, regional and statewide influence through NYS-ABATE (American Bikers Aimed Toward Education) was a progressive stimulant for introducing and passing effective legislation. Rider education and real-smart driving are only two of Bill’s many contributions to teamwork, patriotism and fairness. See REYNOLDS on Page 2D
